BANK ELECTIONS.

Elections of Directors in Most of the National Banks—A Few Changes.
The national banks of the city held their annual election of directors yesterday. The First National last year had but seven directors. The vacancies caused by the death of Nathaniel Trowbridge and Hiram Camp were not filled.
But yesterday the same board as last year was elected, and the names of Max Adler and Thomas Hooker added to bring the number up to nine.

The only change in the list of the Yale National bank was the election of Henry G. Newton to succeed the late Hoadley B. Ives. At the Merchants' bank Franklin Farrell of Ansonia was chosen to succeed the late N. F. Hall. The other banks report no changes.
The Mechanics' and the City Bank hold their election in July.

A Nation of Mourners.

It happened in Korea, near a century and a half ago, that after one king, by his departure from this life, had entailed upon his people the wearing of the mournful white, the two rulers who in succession followed him, at the respective intervals of three and six years, were themselves mowed down by the unsparring harvesters, and as a result, the stricken nation was kept in blanched attire for a continuous period of ten years. By popular account, at the termination of this protracted mourning, some wise man whom the occasion produced suggested that should the people again provide themselves with their many-colored garments worn in happier times, and the alarming mortality so recently experienced should again be suffered by the royal house, the nation would have indulged in the useless garments never to be worn. So, with a view to economy and constant preparation for death's visitation, the Koreans became perpetual mourners. However true this account may be, it remains that a long period of mourning has been grafted upon the national life this custom of wearing only white, observed by all except the officers of the crown.

The male attire for the coolie class consists of two garments of coarse cotton shirtings, baggy trousers, usually rolled to the knee, with an exaggerated-ly long waist that might easily ensnare the head falling over the belt in a loose fold, and a short jacket fastened at the breast, with loose sleeves. Suspended from the belt are a small string of cash (the country's currency) and a tobacco pouch, while in one hand is the ever present pipe, with its thimblelike bowl and reed stem a yard in length. If the feet are at all protected, it is by a pair of straw shoes, or, in rainy weather, by sabots, each with two traverse cleats at the hollow of the sole. All above the coolie class, in addition to the trousers, which they bound tightly about the ankles, and jackets with smaller sleeves, have a flowing gown, belted just under the arms, and reaching to the feet. This last garment, in the case of the wealthy office-holders, is, like their others, of beautiful Chinese linen or of colored silk brocade. The feet are encased in white cotton stockings, thickly wadded with cotton, and Chinese shoes.

The Government and Banking.

Now that the country has this question of banking and currency to settle, the problem ought to be approached with a due sense of its seriousness, and of the obligation of every one having any authority or any word in the matter to do his utmost to attain that which he believes to be absolutely the best solution, and the one that will endure without change for the longest time.
Judged by this, the changed and doctered measure which Mr. Springer, speaking for the treasury department, is urging through the house of representatives is hardly worthy of serious attention. It is a makeshift on a subject in which makeshifts are fraught with danger to the material interests of the country. It cannot accomplish any single object which Mr. Carlisle himself has in view. It cannot make circulation elastic, because it makes it unpredictable. Indeed, under present conditions of the money market, circulation under the proposed plan will be much less profitable than it is under the present system. It will keep alive the silver question, which appears to be dying out, and it will not satisfy those who are looking to state banks to furnish the cure for present currency ills, because it is so framed that state banks will not issue circulation under its provisions.

The best way to deal with any question is the frank and honest way. The relations of the government to the banking interests of the country have turned out disastrously for both. The government's coin is at the mercy of the holders of its paper, and the banks are unable to respond to the demands of business for currency. In 1893, when the demand for currency in this country was clamorous, the national banks were able to increase their circulation about $30,000,000. This year, when the demand is small, the banks are unable to decrease their circulation materially.
In Canada the bank circulation fell, in May of this year, to $28,467,718, nearly the lowest point it had reached in ten years; and in October, when money was needed for the transportation of the crops, it rose to $34,516,651. In this country bank circulation has decreased as bank capital has increased, while in Canada capital and circulation have run together on parallel lines. In this country the government makes circulation dependent upon its debt, not only limiting it, but making it expensive.
In Canada none of a bank's capital is looked up in bonds or wasted in premiums on them, while the banks, with two exceptions, are permitted to issue circulation to the full amount of their paid up capital. The Dominion government requires monthly reports, makes the notes a first lien on the bank's assets, exacts a double liability of shareholders, and compels a five-per-cent. safety fund for failed banks. Under the Canadian system only one bank—the Commercial Bank of Manitoba—has failed, and so ample was the security for its notes considered that, as they bore interest from the date of its suspension, most of them were bought up by the other banks as an investment.

ley; Sr. S., Moss Gompertz; Jr. S., W.

How Antitoxines are Developed.

The new treatment of diphtheria is a practical application of the latest advances of experimental bacteriology.
The general facts upon which it is based are briefly these: Certain bacteria, when developing in the organism of an animal or man, produce an albuminoid poison called a toxine, which, circulating in the blood, causes disease.
For example, the Klebs-Loeffer bacillus, growing in the throat of a child, generates a toxine that produces the systemic condition called diphtheria.

If some of these bacteria be removed from the organism and placed in artificial media, such as broth, under pro-priet conditions they will grow and multiply and produce the same toxine as before. This toxine may now be separated from the bacteria by filtration, and if introduced into an organism by inoculation it will produce the disease as readily as if it had been formed in the organism. But the virulence of the disease thus produced will vary with the quantity of the toxine injected.
Moreover, if the first dose given is so small as to produce only slight illness, a larger quantity may be introduced a few days later without producing a corresponding effect; and progressively larger doses may be administered from time to time, until at last the animal receives with impunity doses many times larger than could possibly be borne at first.

In the case of the diphtheria toxine, for example, (obtained, as has been said, by growing the diphtheria bacillus in meat broth), if fifteen drops of the filtrate containing the toxine be injected into a vein of a horse, the animal will be severely poisoned. But by repeating the injection from time to time in progressing doses, at the end of three or four months the animal will bear a dose of two hundred times the original quantity. In other words, the animal has become immune to the disease.

If now a vein of the immune animal be opened and some blood withdrawn, the serum of that blood (the other constituents being removed) may be injected into the system of another animal or a human being without ill effect, and the animal or human being thus inoculated becomes immune to the disease, in virtue of the inoculation. More than that, if the organism inoculated had already acquired the disease, the inoculation, within reasonable limits, is curative. For example, if a child had been exposed to diphtheria, inoculation with the serum of a horse rendered immune to diphtheria as above described will prevent development of the disease. At a later stage inoculation tends to cure the disease.

These are the facts as applied in the new serum treatment of diphtheria.

The Leyden-Jar.
(From Harper's Young People.)

The Leyden-Jar is a necessary adjunct to any kind of electrical machine, for by it alone can the electricity generated by the machine be stored for the numerous experiments and for imparting shocks. A small jar may be made from an ordinary tin glass tumbler of the largest size; but if a larger jar is desired, a glass bottle or jar with a neck sufficiently wide to admit the hand must be used. Such jars are easily procured. Take the tumbler or jar and paste tin-foil inside it, covering the bottom and extending about three-quarters up its height; when this has been done paste tin-foil on the outside, covering the same surface as has been covered on the inside. When the paste has become perfectly dry trim the upper edges of the tin-foil with a knife, scraping away all the irregularities, and clean the uncovered glass thoroughly.

Now make a lid for the tumbler or jar, so as to fit it. This is best made by being turned out of a piece of three-quarter-inch thick hard-wood; but it can be cut with a knife out of two quarter-inch pieces, one a little larger than the outside of the tumbler or neck of the jar, and the other made to fit inside the tumbler or neck. When these pieces are glued together they will form a sufficient lid. Bore a hole through the center of the lid to receive a stout brass wire, about six inches long, having a brass or lead ball at its upper end. When the lid is put in its place the chain must touch the tin-foil at the bottom.

To use the jar, place it so that its ball is close to the ball of the collector or conductor of the electrical machine, and turn the handle. Sparks will be seen to pass from one ball to another until the Leyden-jar will refuse to receive more. At this stage it is charged with electricity. Now if a person touches the outside coating of tin-foil with one hand and the ball with the other, he will receive an electric shock.
If a string of ten or twenty boys is formed, by joining hands, and the left-hand boy touches the tin-foil of the jar, while the right-hand boy places his finger on the ball, the entire string of boys experiences a shock in the arms.
Such a harmless experiment causes great fun in a gathering of young people.
